

From the New England Magazine.

'Tis See his body, Heaven his spirit, holds,'

And here is his unmade tomb, here the record of his name and death, here the place of tears, and the spot where he is remembered and loved; but he is not here:

There is also one at rest in this inclosure, who was known to a wide circle of friends, and whose bright prospects were early shut in by death. Having enjoyed every advantage for the improvement of his mind, and of preparation for future usefulness, by visiting foreign lands, he returned to the bosom of his family to die. Here he sleeps in the neighborhood of that seminary, where he spent four of the most important years of his life, and in which he formed attachments to several students, who have since been warmly loved to come, and in the spirit of faithfulness and affection, to the service of subjects which had assumed an infinite importance in his mind.—American Quarterly Observer.

But never more that happy voice
Will cheer me on life's thorny way,
And never more that buoyant frame
Will rise with me at peep of day;
But low within the silent vault,
Beneath the dull and senseless clod,
It rests upon the trump shall sound,
The awaking tramp of God!

After having been led to the altar, and then below the cross, where he repeated a number of prayers, he ascended the platform attended by the friar, who carried a large cross in his hand. When the offices of religion were concluded, the man wished to address the people, and twice began, "Mis hermanos," but his voice was instantly drowned by shouts from a crowd at some distance behind the platform, no doubt so instructed; and when he found that he could not be heard, he gave the signal, and the executioner immediately leaped upon his shoulders, and swung off the platform; while the friar continued to speak, and extend the cross towards him, long after he was insensible to his consolations. The spectacle concluded by the friar ascending to the summit of the ladder, and delivering a sermon, in which he did not omit the exhortation of contributing largely towards masses for the soul of the deceased. The exhortation was not without its effect; the little bells immediately began to ring, and hundreds obeyed the invitation to piety.

Sheridan Knowles, author of Virginios, and William Tell, and several other works highly esteemed, found himself in 1832 in rather a difficult situation. Every day he saw represented with the greatest applause, the works with which he had enriched the theatres of his country, and himself in rather a painful state of life,

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1834.

An interesting anecdote of Sheridan Knowles, may be found upon our First Page.

A severe but just rebuke.—The following remarks were made by the Hon. JOHN ANDERSON, at a recent Democratic Caucus in Portland:—

"If we are the refuse and scum of society, how is it that the due observance of law and good order, has so uniformly prevailed, wherever we have the control? Where do we hear of violations of law? of personal insults? of riots and midnight outrages? Who are the approving party to these disgraceful scenes? Who applaud that most dastardly act, the mutilation of the Constitution—which could be palliated or defended only by persons as mean and cowardly as the perpetrators? To that gallant ship the cross of St. George had three covered. She bore the palm on the ocean. Gen. Jackson stripped from the best troops of Wellington, the laurels they had so dearly earned in their wars on the Peninsula. The sight of the ship, or of the General was equally hateful to the party who resolved it becoming a moral and religious people to rejoice at our victories, and the moment an indignity could be offered, it was committed? Was it the act of a single man? Was it condemned or disapproved by all our citizens? Nay, say, was it not openly applauded, openly or secretly by a great majority of our opponents? Was it not announced in this city at the Federal festival in this city on the 4th of July? And was it not received with cheers and approbation?—Was it not adopted as their act? And an act it was, worthy of all who would adopt it."

Petty Maliginity.—During President Jackson's visit to Salem, he accepted of an invitation to visit the East India Museum in that place, and while there was requested to comply with the usual custom of visitors by placing his signature in a book kept for that purpose. Recently his name has been erased from that book; and the word "good" exultingly inserted at the end of the erasure. Comment upon such conduct would be superfluous.

A Doctor's Conscience.—A doctor in Brooklyn, N. Y. brought in a bill against a deceased patient's estate of three thousand five hundred dollars for seven months attendance. The New York Transcript mentions another case where a physician of that city charged two hundred dollars for ten days attendance. It was disputed, and left to arbitrators. Some half dozen of physicians were appointed to decide. It had better have been left to the plaintiff—for, as it turned out, a majority of the judges were in the habit of charging still higher than he. Their views, however, were various.—One's conscience chalked as high as $350; another's was content with 100; and the result was a sort of compromise, which gave the plaintiff two hundred and ten dollars, instead of the two hundred claimed by him!

North Carolina.—In this State, the members of the Assembly consists of 130, and the number of Senators 62—making in joint ballot 192. In 52 counties and 6 towns heard from, the Democrats have elected 100 members, the Federalists and Nullifiers 44, and 16 members, in the 52 counties, their politics not ascertained. There is 62 counties in the State.

The Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, at a meeting held on the 30th ult., unanimously resolved to commemorate the event of the death of Lafayette, by a special meeting of the Grand Lodge for that purpose, and that the Hon. Francis Baylies be requested to pronounce an Eulogy on the occasion. The Committee appointed to carry this measure into effect, have fixed upon the 9th day of October next—at which time the services will take place at the Masonic Temple.

Herr Zaienczech, the Polish Sampson, whose wonderful feats of strength and activity, have astonished all who witnessed them, will go through his performances at the New England Museum, every evening this week, assisted by Maj. Stevens, who will show off with a hornpipe. The Major has fully recovered from the effects of his interview with Crockett, and is in fine health and spirits. The proceeds of the week are for the benefit of Mr Charles Grimes.

The Kentucky papers are disputing upon the expediency of Mr Clay's nomination for the office of President by the Legislature of that State.

There were 19 deaths in New York, during the twenty-four hours preceding Tuesday, at 12 o'clock, M.

The Cholera is extinct both in Albany and Montreal, but still lingers in New York.

Mr Durant will make another ascension from his amphitheatre in Charles street, on Wednesday next.

Latest from Portugal.—We learn from Capt. Kempton, of the brig Clytus, who left Lisbon on the 23d July, that Don Pedro had recovered from his illness, and was to leave on the 25th in a steam boat for Oporto. A Dutch galliot, having property of Don Miguel on board, was seized on the 22nd, and would be confiscated. News had reached that capital, of the entrance of Don Carlos into Spain, and created considerable sensation. The act of Don Pedro in suppressing the Convents, was decidedly popular. They were about being converted into barracks for the soldiers.—Many of them are splendid buildings. The popularity of this act, however, was not sufficient to counter-balance the unpopularity of many other acts and regulations of the government; so that on the whole a good deal of dissatisfaction was felt, and some were of opinion that an explosion was not far distant. It was commonly reported at Lisbon that the new government had been acknowledged by the Pope; and Capt. K. was assured, a day or two before he sailed, that the information was correct.

The Cholera still lingered in Lisbon, though the cases were not very numerous. A large number of Miguelites were on the south side of the Tagus, opposite Lisbon, plundering and robbing every body that came in their way. Among others who had suffered at their hands, were three Englishmen. Travelling between Lisbon and St. Ubes was considered dangerous.—Jour. Com.

Suicide.—On Monday, says the Norfolk Beacon, a stranger of somewhat rough exterior, stepped into the shop of Mr Beauchamp, hair dresser, Main street, and asked for a razor to shave himself, which was given to him; but instead of using it for that purpose, he cut his throat with it so effectually that he died in a few hours. It was subsequently ascertained that his name was John Neal; that he was from Pennsylvania, and by occupation a sail-maker.

A bill of indictment has been found by the grand jury of Perry county, Pa. against a Mrs. Cannel and her two sons, for the murder of the father of the family. They were committed to jail to await their trial in November next.—Western Star.

POLICE COURT.

Olivia Lewis, whose late "night-walking, without any lawful calling, or any necessity so to do," had frequently attracted the notice of the watch, was on Tuesday night tracked round by one of these midnight Paul Pry's, till she evaporated up an alley in Cambridge street. Soon afterwards a couple of young men dropped down against the channel, and one agreed to pass round to reconnoitre for "some of the d-d watchmen," and to whistle if the coast was clear. The shrill signal of "all's well," not coming so speedily as was hoped for by the sanguine sentinel stationed at the alley, he abandoned his post, to search for his comrade. The guard having been thus opportunely withdrawn, Pry entered the sally-port, and was received, by the fond and expecting Olivia, with outstretched arms, and the endearing rebuke—"My dear, how could you stay so long; I was afraid something had happened to you." "I guess you have got the wrong pig by the lug, old lady; and you'll find I've come soon enough, when you know my business," was Paul's rough reply to her affectionate upbraiding and ardent embrace. The Court made some allowance for the shock her delicate feelings must have received by her dreadful disappointment, and she was accordingly let off with a mittimus for one week.

William Swartz, who has been discharged from the State Prison, exactly one week, was duly convicted of stealing a plaid cloak out of a countryman's wagon. Defence—"I was drunk, and as I did not know what I was about, of course I am not guilty." The logic not held conclusive, and two months in house of correction was announced from the awful bench, whereupon tears strated from the eyes of the veteran, because he was not sent to the state prison, where he has established a character for industry, fidelity, and inviolable honor, in keeping his parole, from which circumstance he has always enjoyed unusual liberty in that respectable institution. He has even been allowed to leave the prison yard, on errands for the establishment. The short term of two months, for which he is now sentenced, will hardly admit of his acquiring a character for honor and punctuality with the jealous Captain of the House of Correction.

Things as they are: or Notes of a Traveller, through some of the Middle and Northern States. New York, Harpers: 12 mo. pp. 256, with wood cuts, 1834.

This is a tolerably passable book; but we cannot subscribe to all the Author's opinions; and perhaps he could not subscribe to ours. The style is easy and familiar; and the narrative seldom becomes prolix. A great variety of topics are discussed; many interesting anecdotes introduced; and good taste and judgment displayed in the selection and application of materials, throughout the volume. The author discovers considerable research—shows a fondness for reminiscences, as well as reflections, and both are judiciously introduced.

We can find nothing to raise any serious objection to, but his allusions to, and reflections on the last war; but we forgive him his sins on this point, for the able manner in which he has defended the high attributes of our own mother tongue, the English language—a language, we think, the noblest of any living language; and we fling down our glove, (or as the German calls it, hand-schuh, hand-shoe!) as a challenge to any knight in the Republic of Letters, who dares maintain the contrary.

We ought not to pass without remark, the pictorial illustrations of the volume. Though they are unpretending, they add great value to the work. We are glad to see our publishers getting into the way of illustrating their books with prints and engravings. It will afford encouragement to our American artists, who have been hitherto much neglected.

Two Old Men's Tales—The Deformed and the Admiral's Daughter.—2 vols. 12 mo. New York: Harpers. 1834.

We really cannot say much in favor of these old Men's Tales, except that they are short. The stories are English, and contain a quantum suff. of love and incident to make a lady read in bed in the night, and neglect her toilette in the morning. The one "calculated," in the language of the Almanack makers, "for the meridian of the heart"—more especially if it be a little out of its latitude.

We cannot say we approve of the moral of the "Admiral's Daughter;" the tale is more likely to tempt to transgression, than to hold out a beacon against it. The Innkeeper who went to be shirived was asked "if he had not greased the teeth of his guests' horses?" He said he never heard of such a thing; and what should he do it for? "It will prevent them from eating, said the confessor." The next time Boniface was shirived, "teeth-grasing" was added to the schedule of his sins. There is many an innocent Inez, who would never perhaps dream of two husbands, but for reading the Admiral's Daughter.

When language makes vice familiar to the mind, the heart is already half corrupted, and only wants an opportunity to surrender to discretion.

The London Quarterly Review, for August—No. 102. Boston: Lilly, Wait, Colman & Holden.

This number contains eleven articles, of various degrees of interest; we cannot particularize them all—but among them would notice the Recollections of the Marchioness of Crequi—Despatches of Field Marshal Wellington—Sketches of Italy, Spain and Portugal, by Beckford—Excursions in the North of Europe in 1830—'33, by Jno. Barrow, Jr.—Journal of Three Voyages on the Coast of China, &c., by Charles Gutzlaff, and the History of the Revolution of 1688, by Sir James Mackintosh; perhaps we should add Miss Edgeworth's Helen to the list.

Those who have not time to read a work, will find leisure to read a review of it; and on the whole, these labor-saving machines, the Reviews, are not without their use. Every one cannot be his own doctor—nor every one find time to be his own judge in matters of taste and literature—therefore we must have prescriptions from the faculty, and opinions from the professors of puffing and criticism.

Death of Judge Peters.—The Hon. John T. Peters, one of the Judges of the Superior Court of Connecticut, died on Thursday last at his residence in Hartford, in the 70th year of his age. Judge Peters had been some time in an infirm state of health, but of the immediate cause of his demise we were not informed.

U. S. DISTRICT COURT.

The Murder of Capt. Crosby, of the Juniper.—Henry Joseph, a stout young colored man, from the Spanish Maine, and Amos Otis, supposed to be an Englishman, were arraigned yesterday afternoon, before Judge Davis, to answer to two complaints, entered by James Frederick Peterson, master-mariner,—one for killing James Crosby, master of the Juniper; and another for attempting to kill William Eldred, chief mate. After the complaints were read, Joseph, the negro, rose and attempted to speak, but sobbed and snivelled so violently, as to render his statement unintelligible; but the amount of it was, that he never thought of killing the Captain, till the white man put him up to it; that while he was killing the Captain and first and second mates, Otis was to kill the four men forward, and that they would then take the vessel to Havana.

The examination being preliminary, only one witness (James Frederick Peterson, 2d mate), was examined. He testified that the Juniper was owned by Windsor Fay, and sailed from this port, for Surinam, on the 4th of August, with James Crosby, as master; Henry Joseph, the colored man, was cook. About 20 minutes past 2, on the morning of the 14th of August, it being the witness's watch on deck, he saw the cook in the cabin, (where the mate and captain were asleep,) pretending to trim the lamps, instead of which he blew them out; after a lapse of about two minutes he heard a shriek in the cabin, and going aft met the captain, coming up, and perceiving that he was bloody, caught him in his arms, and asked him what was the matter; the Captain replied—"I don't know;"—he was hardly able to speak; witness carried captain towards the mainmast; the blood was spurting out of his bosom; witness left him laying by the mainmast, while he looked round for something to defend himself; then heard the mate cry for assistance; looking towards the cabin, saw the mate coming up, and the cook following him, and stabbing him with a bayonet; witness struck the cook in the breast with an oar; then took up a piece of a royal yard, and struck him twice, but could not bring him down; then grappled with him, and tried to choke him, but had to thump him several times in the throat before he could make him lie still; he then passed a rope round his neck, and tied his hands. There was no one on deck but Otis, whom the witness called upon for assistance more than twenty times, without receiving any. In the struggle the cook called upon Otis for his knife; Otis replied, that he could not find it, and remained at a distance from the parties. As soon as the witness had mastered the cook, he called the watch up from below, who came on deck immediately, and tying the cook's legs, conveyed him below. Otis assisted in this last operation, as the witness told him if he did not lend a hand, he would serve him as he had served the cook. Previous to the murder, Otis and the cook conversed together a great deal in Spanish. Otis always took the cook's part. The rest of the crew were afraid of Otis, and wished to have him put in irons—the witness has not the least suspicion that any other individual of the crew was privy to the murderous design.

The cook rose up here, and stated that Otis had told him, that he had formerly belonged to a pirate schooner; that he had boarded a brig, in which all hands were killed, &c.

The cook stabbed the Captain with a dirk, in the left breast, and a little above the right hip, each wound being five inches deep. He died almost instantly, and only spoke once. The mate received eighteen wounds from the bayonet, and is still too unwell to attend Court.

Joseph was fully committed for trial, but the examination of Otis was ordered to be continued till Tuesday next.

Handsome compliments were paid, by the counsel for the government and prisoners, to Mr Peterson, for his coolness and courage on the occasion of this dreadful murder.

During the examination, Otis exhibited great restlessness, and excitement, and interrupted the witnesses by interrogatories, frequently. When a statement was made unfavorable to his cause, he would raise his head, and cast an appealing glance to heaven, to witness the foul injustice done him by the witness. He appears to be about 35 years of age, 5 ft 7, in height, and rather stout, and compactly framed; countenance thickly pock-pitted, of a sandy complexion, with a sharp physiognomy, and keen lively grey eyes.

*There was a man at the helm, but he could not see what was going on at the cabin door.

Extraordinary Mortality of the Italian Performers at Havana.—There has seldom perhaps been recorded a more remarkable and melancholy example of mortality than that which has befallen the members of the Italian Opera Company, who arrived in this city in 1832, and who have been, during the past year, performing at Havana.

It was only a year ago that we were listening to the powerful acting and enchanting voice of Signa Pedrotti. She is, probably, by the last accounts, numbered with the dead. Few will forget her beautiful personation of Elisa et Claudio; nor will those who knew her estimable and exemplary conduct in private life as a wife and a mother, refuse to pay a passing tribute to her memory. She made her first successful career at Lisbon, and was afterwards the Prima Donna at the Opera at Richmond Hill in this city. Montresor, the Director of the company, and his son, Dr. Montresor, a talented and learned young physician, and pupil of the celebrated Tomassini, have also fallen victims to the black vomit. Poor young Rappetti also, the leader of the orchestra, the most remarkable violin player that ever came to this country, is the fourth of that distinguished corps who have been consigned to the Campo Santo. Also Salvioni, the leader and composer of the chorusses, an excellent man and first-rate musician. And lastly Corsetti, the barytone singer, and Signorina Saccomani, close the mournful list of these unfortunate strangers, who, in the prime of their life, and in the height of their prosperity, have found a lonely grave in a foreign land.—N. Y. Star.

Samuel Ashton, William Douglass, Robert Stewart, John Davis, George Myers, Thomas Hudson, and Isaac Williams, part of the crew of the ship Merrimack, which returned to this port on Monday, bound to Rio Janeiro and River of Plate, brought before Judge Davis, charged with a revolt, in refusing to do duty on board the ship, and compelling the Capt to put back to this port, have been committed for trial, in default of $400 bonds.—Trans.

We were in error yesterday in saying that the merchants proposed to give a dinner to Capt Howard on his leaving this station. The dinner is to be given by his former friends. The merchants intend to present him with some other token of their respect.—Ibid.

Flying Machine.—The Cincinnati Republican, says, "Mr Masson, an ingenious mechanic, has been engaged some months in constructing a machine or vehicle of this description, in which he expects to be able to navigate the air by the force of steam. There is nothing of the balloon principle connected with the apparatus. It is to be elevated and propelled by machinery, in the shape of wings. We have looked at the machine, which is now nearly finished, and whether it prove successful or unsuccessful, it is a beautiful and ingenious piece of mechanism."

Dreadful Catastrophe.—It seldom falls to our lot to record a more melancholy event than one which occurred at the Park yesterday. Several lads climbed a tree in pursuit of a squirrel, when one of them, (a fine boy, named James Morgan, aged 14, lately residing at No. 6 Ferry street,) fell, and in his descent caught by the iron rails, one of which entered under the right side of his chin and another in his left cheek. The former penetrated to the brain—the blood gushed from his nose and mouth, and he was instantly a corpse.—N. Y. Times.

Awful effects of passion.—A woman aged thirty-six years, named Maria Tanner, living at the corner of Walnut and Cherry streets, quarrelled with another woman living in the same house, on Saturday, about some trifling affair; but ultimately became so enraged at the forbearance of her antagonist, and worked herself into such a dreadful state of passion, that on stooping to seize a poker to strike the other woman, she was seized with a fit, and dropped dead on the spot.—N. Y. Star.

A pretty considerable Headache.—A jolly son of Bacchus, who wears a nose like a handful of strawberries, and resides within a hundred miles of Matlock Bath, after having sacrificed at the shrine of the rosy god, thus described the sensations, on the ensuing morning—"Talk of headache." My head aches all over, from the crown to my chin! Every hair on my head aches! and (pulling out half a dozen) I can feel these ache while I hold them in my hand."

Unexpected Good Fortune.—A bailiff having been ordered by Lady Hardwicke to procure a sow of the breed and size she particularly described to him, came one day into the dining room when full of great company, proclaiming with a burst of joy he could not suppress—"I have been at Royston fair, my lady, and got a sow exactly of your ladyship's size."

The assignees of Mr Haynes, known as Pea Green Haynes, some years ago, have determined to apply for the restoration of the jewels presented to Miss Foote the actress, previous to her marriage to a nobleman. They are valued at £5000, and had been previously asked for by Mr Haynes, but she refused to return them.

Suicide.—A wretched woman named Betsey Donald, who had long led a life of dissipation and misery, in a drunken fit attempted on Saturday to strangle her infant, the fruit of an illicit intercourse with a seafaring man named Hardy, for whom she had abandoned her husband. Failing in this, she took poison, and died at the hospital on Saturday afternoon.—N. Y. Star.

Fay in his admirable letters from Europe, published in the New York Mirror, says that in walking through one of the splendid galleries of art in Genoa, "the valet pointed out a bust of Washington, informing me that he was a celebrated American poet.—Long may his works last in their present binding."

Stop Thief.—The clothing store of Mr Philip T. White, on Central street, in this town, was entered last evening, by means of false keys, and two rolls of valuable broadcloth taken. Mr White has offered a reward for the detection of the thief.—Lowell Jour.

Measures not Men.—Married, at Washington, on the 17th August, Mr Josiah Peck, to Miss Aurelia Bushel.—N. Y. Times.

They can be obtained at the various Book stores, and by the quantity on application to ROBERT ANDREWS, No. 91 Washington st. Price 12 cents, each, single."

DR. WARNER'S PURIFYING VEGETABLE POWDERS, Or FAMILY BITTERS—yielding its strength to Wine or water.

In the spring of the year, every one is troubled more or less with a propensity to sleep, and by the use of this corrective it can be obviated entirely. For purifying and enlivening all kinds of humors from the blood, even if they appear externally.

in the face, or any part of the body, it is much better and more efficacious than any external application; in fact I seldom knew it to fail proving effectual. The patient will find it operates more in the blood than any other preparation they ever referred to; it is far better than salts, sulphur, cream water, or any other preparation of this kind, for when the blood is once purified with this corrective, it remains in an even temperature through the summer months. For a foul stomach, jaundice, general debility, weakness of limbs, want of appetite, billious and liver complaints, headach, stupor, &c. or the catarrh which is generally occasioned by the impure ate of the blood, there is nothing extant that has proved so efficacious as this purifying corrective. For all the above implants it is seldom known to fail in proving an effectual remedy.

It is really worth the public attention, as every one is ware of the unpleasant, dull, heavy feeling, which the spring the year produces; and by the use of this corrective, it can obviated entirely. Every one who makes use of the above eparation, will be astonished at the mild and gentle effect it as on the blood.

CERTIFICATES

This is to certify, that I have been troubled in the spring and summer seasons with a dull and stupid feeling, which very much troubled me while about my business, and by taking me of Warner's Purifying Powders, I have found it a perfect remedy, and with confidence recommend it to others who may similarly affected. ELIAS PIKE.

PURE BEAR'S OIL may be had by the groce, dozen or single bottle, of A. BOYDEN, Hancock-st.

As in all cases, & especially in this, Venders, if they wish to cure the patronage of the public, should be extremely cautious not to sell an article for the Hair which tends to counteract rather than assist nature.

The virtues of Bear's Oil have been too long tested to need any eulogium; and at this time, no energy, dignity or intellect is a very best article for strengthening and promoting the growth of the Hair. An honest prejudice against the use of Par's Oil has long existed, arising from two causes—the improper method of purifying it, and the imposition upon the public of a spurious article. That this prejudice may be whol-removed, this article now offered is warranted the pure Oil, rendered more pleasant by the addition of a little perfume—and the possibility of its injuring the Hair is entirely precluded by the manner in which it has been purified. To prevent fraud, the genuine is enclosed in two wrappers, the inside one being signed, Arnold Beaudouin.
